

India also able to be superpower

EU more likely to 'own' century

Letter, Jan. 13.

Letter writer Felix Tossan has correctly pointed out that China is not the only potential superpower. I would suggest that India is a strong candidate to "own" this century. Like China, India has maintained strong economic growth; unlike China, India has done so while preserving freedom and democracy. Like the West, India has an independent judiciary, free press and institutions that uphold the rule of law. These core capabilities will count more in the long run than the "copycat" model of Chinese growth which is creating such hype today.
