

Toronto Sun Letter to Editor published Dec 8,2007

GIVE US A SAY

While defending the banning of Golden Compass by Catholic schools, Michael Coren states it would be understandable if anti-Semitic texts were banned by Jewish schools. There is a major difference, of course: Jewish schools are privately funded, while the taxpayer bankrolls Catholic schools. The Catholic school board would be free to censor whomever they pleased, if they funded themselves. But as long as they bill us for their operations, all taxpayers should have a vote in these controversial decisions. It seems in Ontario, Catholic schools get to have their cake and gorge themselves on it.

Ron Banerjee

Director, Hindu Conference of Canada